WAR STORIES

A MEMOIR OF NIGERIA AND BIAFRA

John Sherman

John Sherman arrived in Nigeria in 1966 as a Peace Corps Volunteer teacher. Less than a year later, he was evacuated from what had become the secessionist Republic of Biafra. He continued his Peace Corps service in Malawi. Sherman returned to West Africa in 1968 and joined the relief effort on the Nigerian side of the war. He first worked at the airport in Lagos, Nigeria's capital, then he was sent to the war zone to work with a medical/food distribution team that operated clinics and feeding stations north of Port Harcourt, in an area that had, briefly, been a part of Biafra. They provided aid to thousands of people every week.

War Stories: A Memoir of Nigeria and Biafra serves as his account of those months in 1968 and 1969, with flashbacks to his Peace Corps experiences in the same area of Nigeria. The book also contains photos taken by the author during the war.
